GALLANT R.A.F. SMASHES BACK THE NAZI INVADER

DRAMATIC CABLEPHOTO (above) was taken by Herbert Andrews of Planet News Pictures, England, from a cliff overlooking the channel

GRIM, FORBIDDING are the cliffs at Beachy Head that tower 532 feet above the sea, symbol of Britain's iron-bound ramparts. Near them was fought the famous naval battle with France in 1690

BRITISH CONFIDENT IN ISLAND FORTRESS

SUPREME CONVICTION in the rightness of her cause, and supreme confidence in the might of her arms, are the lines of defence, unseen but real, that lie behind Britain's barbed-wire barricades, anti-aircraft guns and tank traps. Nazis may fancy their delay is resulting in enervating suspense, but actually it is only giving the great island fortress time to gird on all her armor. "It's no longer somebody else's war, it's our own," says the Englishman today. And radiating this quiet confidence in her impregnability is Britain's land chief, General Sir Alan Francis Brooke, who won his spurs in the glorious action at Dunkirk. Behind him stand Britain's seasoned first-line troops, behind them her million and a quarter home guard volunteers—behind them again that indomitable British courage

CO-ORDINATION and team-play is a vital factor in defence. Here is a gun crew acknowledging orders from the control centre to fire

INVADER TO FIND A HORNET'S NEST

DEFENCE-IN-DEPTH system of the eastern and southern coasts of England is a marvel of military skill and efficiency. From the barbed wire and machine-gun nests on the beaches, a zone extends back for 20 miles filled with tank traps, concealed artillery and pill-boxes, making a fine web-like mesh. Regular army is given the task of defending this zone, as well as the key airports and harbors, and they are ably reinforced by Empire troops — latest Canadian contingent to land is bolstering the defence at a port in northern England. Any enemy, however, that did succeed in breaking the sea-line would find a million and a quarter home guard volunteers ready to defend the gaps, in farmlands and moorlands. Many of the home guards are older men, with a hard core of veterans of the first world war, all keen for a crack at the invaders. Duty of the home guards is to patrol roads, delay advance of an invading army, and assist the regular army in guarding vital posts. Often a home guard's watch is lonely and silent, but in his hands the loopholes are safe. In addition, many highway blocks have been cleared to make for greater mobility of troops, to enable defenders to rush to any spot

WE'RE READY FOR OUR JOB, SAYS EVERY ENGLISHMAN

table." During lectures, paper discs are thrown on the town, representing bombs—wardens learn to deal with the area hit. The toy models used include fleets of ambulances, and figures represent firemen, wardens, police and other defence workers

BRITAIN'S SKILLED AIR DEFENDERS AT THEIR POSTS

WARNED OF approaching enemy aircraft, the searchlight unit, vital part of air defences, goes into action. Sound locator is in foreground

"SPOTTER," seated, uses glasses, while his assistant, kneeling, observes through open sights

LARGE-SCALE invasion of Britain must come by sea, as following R.A.F. surveys, all land where Nazi transports could land troops from the air has been plowed up and covered by defence units. An invasion by sea, however, would face such frightful slaughter that only a desperate Hitler would take the risk. It would have to pass not only the powerful British navy, but would have to meet the fire of the hidden batteries on the coast, and from the 200 secret air-dromes would swarm fast fighters that would smash it from the air. It was Sir Alan Brooke who co-ordinated the air defences, taken of a splendid job being done by a splendid group of men

BATTERY OF NAVAL GUNS on England's east coast goes into action. Such guns have great range and power, would be deadly in an invasion

BRITAIN'S WOMEN PLAY VITAL ROLE IN DEFENCE

IN OTHER WARS, it's been the women who have said good-by to the men—in this war, it's often the men saying good-by to the women, too. Above, some W.A.T.S. off for duty

RUNAWAY FROM A ROOF GARDEN!

"Joan please do it!" we begged. "It's our one chance of getting back to this wonderful place!" We'd scraped and planned for one swell evening at the Roof Garden, and if Joan and Jimmy could just win the "Dancing Hour" contest we'd all be invited to come again—as guests! "Please, Joany—" I urged. "You and Jimmy are the best dancers." But what did Joan do but get up and run away!

"This is no time for stage fright!" I said when I found her in the dressing room. Then Joan told me her woes. "Crazy girl!" I ranted. "Why worry about chafing? Haven't you heard of Modess? Modess is softer," I explained. "It gives so much more comfort because it's made of fluff, not papery folds!"

Well, Joany was on her toes when contest time rolled around. And were we thrilled to pieces when she and Jimmy won first place! Joan was excited, too. "But listen—" she whispered to me later. "The big thrill of this evening for me was discovering Modess! Such wonderful comfort! Fluff makes a difference all right!"

Get Curious! Get Comfortable!

Cut a napkin made of papery folds—then cut a Modess pad—and feel the difference! No close-packed layers in Modess—but gentle, downy-soft fluff! So absorbent, this fluff is a miracle of protection. So soft, it's a miracle of comfort! And that isn't all...

Instead of papery folds

Press that fluff and notice how it yields. That's why Modess moulds to the body so comfortably without bulk or bunching—why it stays smooth and flat where you want flatness. Thanks to "moisture zoning," Modess stays softer, too! And its moisture-resistant locking guards against striking through!

New Miracle Modess-Softer-Safer!

THE Spirit THAT IS CANADA!

● The determination to carry on . . . to fight, to work, to do it harder than ever—and to do it together! That's the spirit that is Canada today.

The Canadian National Exhibition will crystallize that glorious spirit. The government, armed services, the manufacturers, the scientists, the entertainers, the athletes — all are co-operating.

At Exhibition Park this year will be an R.C.A.F. Depot. You will be shown preliminary training, you will see an absorbing Ground Show. Picked men of the R.C.A.F. will go through the ancient Empire ceremony of the "Changing of the Guard" at sundown each evening.

You will see armoured war vehicles made for the troops of the Empire. The Red Cross has set up a huge exhibit to show the work they are doing. Industry, science, international trade, agriculture . . . all will show the stimulus of Canada at war.

There will be entertainment features too, on a greater scale than ever. Duke Ellington, Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey, Sammy Kaye, and other leading dance bands will be there to thrill you. The famous Goldman's Band will play nightly from the outdoor Band Shell. The Pageant—"Cradle of Empire" will be more dazzling, more stirring than ever. "Lucky" Tetter, and other top-ranking acts will be on the long list of attractions.

This year come and see for yourself—the spirit that is Canada.

SCREEN STARS OF TOMORROW ON PARADE

FILM FANS will recall Lucille Ball's blonde hair, blue eyes, in "Roman Scandals" and "Roberta"

MARGARET TALLICHET'S latest film is "Stranger on the Third Floor"

VETERAN in experience in this march-past of screenland lovelies, Lucille Ball will soon be seen in "Dance, Girl, Dance," typical of the new movie trend toward more fun and romance. Lucille hails from Montana, was in "Kid Millions" and "Roberta." But her four up-and-coming rivals promise to give her a run for fandom favor. Two of them hail from Texas—Ann Miller and Margaret Tallichet. Ann started her film career in 1937, starred in "Room Service" and "Tarnished Angel," while dark-eyed, serious Margaret got off on the right foot in the same year with "A Star Is Born." Margaret's a college grad, is wed to Director William Wyllie. Vivacious Mary Beth Hughes hails from Missouri, was educated in Washington, made her debut there. The stock company she was with tripled the movie offer when her Hollywood "break" came along, but the call of the Kleig lights was too strong. Her last film was "Four Sons." Vera Haal is of French and Dutch ancestry, born in New York. She likes swimming, riding and prefers rhumba

She Caught the Bouquet...

But I Caught the Man!

I'm not superstitious—but when Helen's blonde bridesmaid caught the bouquet, I was plenty scared. I mean, at the way my George was looking at her... even if he said he preferred brunettes!

She smiled at him—and then I knew I needn't worry. My "Come-Closer" Smile—thanks to Pepsodent with Irium—had it all over hers, like diamonds to glass. And, sure enough, that night George popped the question, and I set the date—for soon.

I'm telling her (right after my wedding) about Pepsodent with Irium. After all there are plenty of men (but only one George). And plenty of dentifrices—but only one Pepsodent, with Irium, to keep teeth glistening and to dazzle up your smile.

6-WEEKS-OLD BABIES FED SOLID FOODS

Newest achievement in the development of baby foods is indicated by clinical and laboratory reports which state six-weeks-old babies are being fed homogenized vegetables and fruits. Before the development of the special homogenization method, such early solid food feeding was impossible. But now, as clinical and laboratory tests show, homogenized foods can be digested much faster than strained foods. Increased nourishment from homogenized vegetables and fruits with less work for babies' digestion, is another reported advancement over strained foods. Homogenization of baby foods is an exclusive process developed by LIBBY, McNEILL & LIBBY and these products are sold at most grocery stores.

Modern mothers on the alert for new methods in baby care will be particularly interested in the 24-page, free, illustrated booklet entitled—"Your Baby's First Vegetables and Fruits," obtainable on written request to LIBBY'S, Chatham, Ontario.

ALL THE ANIMALS at the London Zoo seem imbued with war enthusiasm these days. Here is the pelican family voicing their ideas of what's what

"BUSINESS AS USUAL," in spite of the alarms of war is the motto of the zoo inhabitants in England these days. Talk early in the war was of getting rid of some of the more dangerous animals in the event that a gas attack or bombing raid let them loose, but authorities decided this was not necessary and, as these pictures will attest, zoos throughout the country are still being maintained and are still a mecca for zoo fans. Of the more docile zoo-land folk, many have been "adopted" as pets by Britishers. Maintenance of zoos is but one of many indications the Britisher is determined to pursue the "even terror" of his ways in spite of the critical times in which he finds himself. Even the animals seem to have caught the war fervor — the British lion is one of the zoo's most popular figures, and the beavers and kangaroos are favorites with the men from overseas. Provision has already been made for their safety if raids occur
